

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

I Am the Bread of Life

People who are hungry always “think” with their stomachs. This keeps them locked within a primitive experience of their humanity and may make them seem uncivilised or unreasonable to those of us whose bellies are round with our last meal. Hungry people ARE unreasonable; that is, they cannot reason their way past the ache of real need.

Being hungry is not a virtue. If it were, the poor would all be holy, the rich would all be evil. But that’s obviously not true. The state of our hearts can’t be measured by the size of our wallets. But the condition of our hearts CAN be measured by our willingness to share what we have. When we seek to alleviate the distress of those in need, we do two things right. We lift up someone locked down by hunger so that he or she too might rise to a greater and fuller life. And we also expand our hearts through the practice of generosity so that we might experience “the food that endures for eternal life”. It’s a win-win situation. For as long as we work only for the food that perishes and hoard that for ourselves, we prolong the misery of the world and will not know the joy that belongs to those whose hearts are free to give.

Jesus said, “I am the Bread of Life. The person who aligns with me hungers no more and thirsts no more, ever”.

When have you been the recipient of someone’s generosity in sharing time, warmth, or food with you? How can you share those things with those in need, near or far?

We Respond ...

Take a refresher course in the corporal works of mercy: Feed the hungry. Give drink to the thirsty. Clothe the naked. Shelter the homeless. Visit the sick. Visit the imprisoned. Bury the dead. Reflect on ways to participate in these works regularly.
